SHAREMONKEY HELPS PEOPLE BUY THEIR PIRATED MATERIAL

New file to product matching service released leadbullet (www.leadbullet.net) today released a new product aimed at helping users of peer to peer (p2p) and other download technologies in purchasing the items they have downloaded.

Research has shown that p2p technology is used in part as a “try before you buy” mechanism to find new music artists and other entertainment.

ShareMonkey (www.sharemonkey.com) aims to help those users to easily identify the product a file comes from and subsequently purchase the legitimate, tangible product.

ShareMonkey works by right clicking on a file and choosing “Where is this file from?” in Microsoft Windows. There is also full support provided for the Shareaza p2p application.

leadbullet is a peer to peer startup company, situated in England and The Netherlands. leadbullet's primary aim is to provide an easy mechanism for people to legitimately purchase their copyright infringing files.
